9. European energy security strategy (10.06.2015) Amendment 2: "Underlines the fact that nuclear energy entails high environmental and health risks, with no solution for waste; calls on Member States and the EU institutions to phase out subsidies and other public funding for the construction, operation and life extension of new and existing nuclear facilities, and for the final disposal of nuclear waste, and to ensure that nuclear undertakings are held fully responsible for the associated economic and environmental legacy risks;" <http://www.votewatch.eu/en/term8-european-energy-security-strategy-motion-for-resolution-after-paragraph-44-amendment-2.html> - Term 8
10. European energy security strategy (10.06.2015), Paragraph 32: "Stresses that a binding energy efficiency target would be the cost-efficient way to reduce Europe's energy dependency while at the same time protecting industry and households from rising energy bills; recalls that Parliament adopted, in its resolutions of 5 February 2014(1) and 26 November 2014(2), three binding targets including an energy efficiency target of 40 %, a renewables target of at least 30 % and a GHG target of at least 40 %; deplores in this context the lack of ambition on energy efficiency shown by the European Council at its October

2014 summit, in setting a non-binding target of just 27 % with no individual targets for Member States;”

12. Possibility for Member States to restrict or prohibit the cultivation of GMOs in their territory (05.07.2011) amendment 41:” (a) those measures are based on (i) duly justified grounds relating to local or regional environmental impacts which might arise from the deliberate release or the placing on the market of GMOs and which are complementary to the environmental impacts examined during the scientific assessment of the impacts on the environment conducted under Part C of this Directive, or grounds relating to risk management. Those grounds may include:

- the prevention of the development of pesticide resistance amongst weeds and pests;
 - the invasiveness or persistence of a GM variety, or the possibility of interbreeding with domestic cultivated or wild plants;
 - the prevention of negative impacts on the local environment caused by changes in agricultural practices linked to the cultivation of GMOs;
 - the maintenance and development of agricultural practices which offer a better potential to reconcile production with ecosystem sustainability;
 - the maintenance of local biodiversity, including certain habitats and ecosystems, or certain types of natural and landscape features;
 - the absence or lack of adequate data concerning the potential negative impacts of the release of GMOs on the local or regional environment of a Member State, including on biodiversity;
- (ii) grounds relating to socio-economic impacts. Those grounds may include:
- the impracticability or the high costs of coexistence measures or the impossibility of implementing coexistence measures due to specific geographical conditions such as small islands or mountain zones;
 - the need to protect the diversity of agricultural production; or
 - the need to ensure seed purity;

(iii) other grounds that may include land use, town and country planning, or other legitimate factors;”
